What use to be a hot tourist attraction found only in the busiest and farthest bars of Chicago can now be enjoyed right here in the suburbs. The Chicago Duelling Pianos is a world-class piano duo that offers not only great music you can dance and sing along to but also a bit of comedy and plenty of unforgettable audience interaction. The music performed and parodied on any given night runs from the 30s through the 90s and ranges from Rock to Country to even Rap. Rapping duelling pianos?? It's something you have to see to thoroughly enjoy. This show will get you out of your seat and doing the hokey pokey or even a kicking chorus line. There is no telling where the night will take you.

Part of the shows main attraction is that it's impossible to ever see the same show twice. The audience has control of not only the song list but how and when the songs are actually played. If the piano men don't think the crowd is digging a tune, they'll just start playing another one. It's like a live jukebox but better and with a sense of humor.

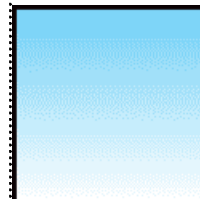

Two of the men responsible for showing a crowd the time of their lives are Dave Roberts and Steven Kouba. Dave Roberts, a Billboard Top 10 chart topper is a member of the "Duelling Pianos International" and is known as the master of silly hats and wacky props. Having appeared on the Oprah Winfrey Show and performed in Las Vegas, Soldier Field and Times Square, Roberts is no stranger to playing for a large crowd hungry for excitement.

A familiar face around Chicago's entertainment biz, Steven Kouba has played everywhere from small intimate venues to large festivals and rock and roll stages. He also performs in a glam rock 80's band called "Quantum Leap." Kouba's love and passion for music can be seen at any of his performances.

They have been known to travel the country and perform at bars, clubs and parties. All you really have to do is call them up and tell them where you want them to go. Otherwise take a rather short and pleasant drive to any one of these fabulous bars, grab a drink, sit back, and enjoy one of the best live acts in town.
